Is America Heading In The Right Direction?

I believe that America is not heading in the right direction as it should be. Some of the factors that contribute to this include the big battle between the Republicans and Democrats, illegal immigration, and shootings. I believe that America is not heading in the right direction due to the fact of there being illegal immigration, mass shootings, and the huge battle between the Republicans and Democrats.

The first reason why I believe this is because of the fact that the Republicans and Democrats cannot stop battling with each other. They always waste their time, which could be used to improve problems in America, to instead go and battle each other. Just think of all the time they spent getting into disputes with each other, which could have been used to fix some of the big problems America is facing today.

My second reason is because of illegal immigration. This is a big problem America is currently facing right now. Illegal immigration is where someone, who is not a registered United States citizen, comes into the country and lives here without registering as a citizen. This is a problem because of two things, we must pay taxes for them when they aren't even citizens, and they also cause disturbance in this country. Some illegal immigrants don't cause any harm, but a lot of them cause harm by killing/hurting other people. Just imagine someone of your family being killed by someone who isn't even supposed to be in the United States, it is a very tragic and triggering thing to be happening in this country.

My final reason is because of mass shootings. As time goes on, more shootings seem to happen repeatedly, and many lives are taken by this happening. As of September 1st, of this year, 283 mass shootings have occurred. Think of that for a second, September 1st is the 244th day of the year and 283 shootings have occurred. That means that so far there have been more shootings than the amount of days that we have gone through during this year so far. Here is my point for this, why would someone want to go out and take the lives of so many innocent people, just for either the enjoyment of it or just because they are insane? People need to realize that shooting and killing people is not going to fix anything in this country, and if they think that then they have a problem.

Many factors contribute to the conclusion that America is not heading in the full right direction. Some of those factors including the constant battling of the Republicans and Democrats, illegal immigration, and mass shootings. These things are not helping the country in any way shape or form. We need to somehow eliminate these things so we can have a country with people being treated equally and fair, as how this country was originally founded upon.
